The performance data quoted herein represents past performance. Past performance is not a guarantee of future results. The investment return and principal value of an investment will fluctuate so that an investor's shares, when redeemed, may be worth less than their original cost, and current performance may be lower than the performance quoted. Returns greater than one year are annualized. Total returns assume reinvestment of dividends and capital gains distributions at net asset value when paid. Investment performance reflects contractual fee waivers. In the absence of such fee waivers, total return would be reduced. Investor Class shares charge up to a 0.25% annual shareholder service fee.

The MSCI World Index is a free float-adjusted market capitalization index, designed to measure developed market equity performance. The Index is gross of withholding taxes, assumes reinvestment of dividends and capital gains, and assumes no management, custody, transaction or other expenses. The Fund's value discipline may prevent or restrict investment in major stocks in the benchmark index. It is not possible to invest directly in an index.

Market commentary

Fueled by additional doses of quantitative easing, the first two months of calendar 2012 proved to be a complete reversal of the latter half of 2011 (especially the July through October 2011 period). The euphoria waned in March, however, as investors rotated out of cyclical stocks to more economically-defensive holdings. Despite these shifts, and due primarily to superior stock selection, the Fund outperformed the MSCI World Index this quarter. The top performing markets in the World Index included Germany, Singapore, Belgium, Denmark, and Finland. Japan delivered the best performance measured in yen, but translated into US dollars, the returns nearly halved. The biggest laggards included Spain, Portugal, the United Kingdom, and Israel. Top performing sectors in the World Index included the following economically cyclical sectors: information technology, financials, consumer discretionary, industrials, and materials, while four of the five biggest laggards were traditional defensives: telecommunication services, utilities, consumer staples, and health care as well as energy. Relative performance was strengthened by fund holdings in the transportation, energy, healthcare equipment & services, capital goods, and insurance industry groups. Meanwhile, holdings in the consumer services, pharmaceuticals & biotechnology, and software & services industry groups as well as underweights to the diversified financials and technology hardware & equipment industry groups detracted from relative performance. The largest individual contributor to return was postal services provider, PostNL (Netherlands). The share price soared on the news of a buy-out offer from UPS for the recently listed express parcel delivery firm, TNT Express. Additional top contributors to return included health care provider, Molina Healthcare (US), plant construction engineer, JGC Corp (Japan), Honda Motor (Japan), and software giant, Microsoft (US). Two of the largest detractors were US-listed for-profit higher education program providers, Apollo Group and DeVry. Additional notable detractors included money transfer provider, Western Union (US), independent oil company, Anadarko Petroleum Corporation (US), and recently purchased integrated oil & gas company, Total (France).
