Market commentary

Emerging market equity prices fell during the second quarter amid concerns that global growth is slowing. The MSCI Emerging Markets Index ("Index") returned -7.95% in local currency terms during the period. The emerging Latin America region was the poorest performing region in local currency terms. The emerging Europe, Middle East, and Africa ("EMEA") and emerging Asia regions also posted negative returns during the quarter. Information technology, materials, and financials were the weakest performing sectors within the Index. Consumer discretionary, utilities, and consumer staples were the top performing sectors in the second quarter.

The Causeway Emerging Markets Fund ("Fund") underperformed the Index during the quarter. We use both bottom-up "stock-specific" and top-down factor categories to seek to forecast alpha for the stocks in the Fund's investable universe. Our bottom-up price momentum, growth, and competitive strength factors were negative indicators during the quarter. Our valuation factor was a positive indicator during the quarter and year-to-date period. Of our top-down factors, country and sector were negative indicators while macroeconomic and currency were positive.

Over the quarter, Fund holdings in the emerging Asia region detracted from relative performance, primarily due to negative stock selection in India and China. Within the EMEA region, stock selection in Turkey and the United Arab Emirates contributed to relative performance. Positioning in the emerging Latin America region contributed to relative performance, primarily due to positive stock selection in Brazil. From a sector perspective, the largest detractors from relative performance were consumer discretionary, materials, and consumer staples. The greatest contributors to relative performance were financials, communication services, and energy. The largest stock-level detractors from relative performance included overweight positions in integrated aluminum producer & copper manufacturer, Hindalco Industries (India), and circuit board manufacturer, Unimicron Technology Corp. (Taiwan), as well as an underweight position in e-commerce platform for local products & services, Meituan (China). The greatest stock-level contributors to relative performance included overweight positions in solar panel component manufacturing company, Daqo New Energy (China), and solar power company, Tongwei Co (China), as well as an underweight position in diversified metals & mining operator, Vale SA (Brazil).

The Morningstar Analyst Rating™ is not a credit or risk rating. It is a subjective evaluation performed by Morningstar's manager research group, which consists of various Morningstar, Inc. subsidiaries ("Manager Research Group"). In the United States, that subsidiary is Morningstar Research Services LLC, which is registered with and governed by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. The Manager Research Group evaluates funds based on five key pillars, which are process, performance, people, parent, and price. The Manager Research Group uses this five pillar evaluation to determine how they believe funds are likely to perform relative to a benchmark, or in the case of exchange-traded funds and index mutual funds, a relevant peer group, over the long term on a risk-adjusted basis. They consider quantitative and qualitative factors in their research, and the weight of each pillar may vary. The Analyst Rating scale is Gold, Silver, Bronze, Neutral, and Negative. A Morningstar Analyst Rating of Gold, Silver, or Bronze reflects the Manager Research Group's conviction in a fund's prospects for outperformance. Analyst Ratings ultimately reflect the Manager Research Group's overall assessment, are overseen by an Analyst Rating Committee, and are continuously monitored and reevaluated at least every 14 months.

The Morningstar Analyst Rating (i) should not be used as the sole basis in evaluating a fund, (ii) involves unknown risks and uncertainties which may cause Analyst expectations not to occur or to differ significantly from what they expected, and (iii) should not be considered an offer or solicitation to buy or sell the fund.
