Market commentary

Geopolitical tensions and concerns of a broader slowdown in global economic growth fueled stock market volatility in the fourth quarter and weighed on emerging market ("EM") equities. The MSCI Emerging Markets Index ("Index") returned -7.36% in local currency terms during the period. Slowing growth in China and continuing trade tensions pressured Chinese equities and the broader emerging Asia region. The emerging Europe, Middle East, and Africa ("EMEA") region also posted negative returns during the quarter. Led by Brazil, the emerging Latin America region ended the period in positive territory. Health care, information technology, and consumer discretionary were the weakest performing sectors within the Index in local currency terms. Utilities, real estate, and financials were the top performing sectors during the quarter.

The Causeway Emerging Markets Fund ("Fund") underperformed the Index in the fourth quarter of 2018. We use both bottom-up and top-down factor categories to forecast alpha (return in excess of the Index) for the stocks in the Fund's investable universe. Our bottom-up value factor category was a positive indicator in the fourth quarter and our top performing bottom-up factor during the year. The earnings growth and price momentum factor categories were negative indicators during the quarter. Earnings growth, however, was a positive indicator for the year. Of our top-down factors, the macroeconomic, country, and currency factors were negative indicators during the quarter. The sector factor was a positive indicator during the quarter and the year.

Over the quarter, Fund positioning in emerging Asia detracted from performance versus the Index, primarily driven by negative stock selection in China and Taiwan. Within the emerging Latin America region, stock selection in Brazil detracted from relative performance. An underweight position in South Africa detracted from relative performance in the EMEA region. From a sector perspective, the largest detractors from relative performance were energy, financials, and information technology. Positioning in the industrials, consumer discretionary, and consumer staples sectors contributed to relative performance. The largest stock-level detractors from relative performance included an overweight position in oil & gas exploration & production company, China Petroleum & Chemical Corp. (China), and underweight positions in bank, Banco Bradesco SA (Brazil), and banking services provider, Itau Unibanco Holding SA (Brazil). The greatest stock-level contributors to relative performance included overweight positions in financial & industrial holdings company, Investimentos Itau (Brazil), bank, Banco do Brasil SA (Brazil), and consumer goods company, Hindustan Unilever Ltd. (India).

Mutual fund investing involves risk, including possible loss of principal. In addition to the normal risks associated with equity investing, international investing may involve risk of capital loss from unfavorable fluctuations in currency values, from differences in generally accepted accounting principles, or from economic or political instability in other nations. Emerging markets involve heightened risks related to the same factors, as well as increased volatility and lower trading volume. Current and future holdings are subject to risk. Diversification does not protect against market loss. There is no guarantee that securities mentioned will remain in or out of the Fund.

The Morningstar Analyst Rating™ is not a credit or risk rating. It is a subjective evaluation performed by Morningstar's manager research group, which consists of various Morningstar, Inc. subsidiaries ("Manager Research Group"). In the United States, that subsidiary is Morningstar Research Services LLC, which is registered with and governed by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. The Manager Research Group evaluates funds based on five key pillars, which are process, performance, people, parent, and price. The Manager Research Group uses this five pillar evaluation to determine how they believe funds are likely to perform relative to a benchmark, or in the case of exchange-traded funds and index mutual funds, a relevant peer group, over the long term on a risk-adjusted basis. They consider quantitative and qualitative factors in their research, and the weight of each pillar may vary. The Analyst Rating scale is Gold, Silver, Bronze, Neutral, and Negative. A Morningstar Analyst Rating of Gold, Silver, or Bronze reflects the Manager Research Group's conviction in a fund's prospects for outperformance. Analyst Ratings ultimately reflect the Manager Research Group's overall assessment, are overseen by an Analyst Rating Committee, and are continuously monitored and reevaluated at least every 14 months.
